

Oxygen Energy Therapy

The breath of fresh air you've been waiting for

Maximising the Benefit of Every Breath

Breathe new life

Introducing SoeMac, a non-invasive, alternative Oxygen Energy Therapy treatment that is helping people with a wide range of sleep, low energy, and health problems. It is a completely natural device that works by drawing air inside, and producing a bio-usable form of energised oxygen, known as Singlet Oxygen Energy, or SOE.

Feeling tired and lethargic can be a sign that oxygen levels are being compromised, which can lead to a weaker immune system and faster ageing. SoeMac is a clever little device that can be used at home to give the body an extra energy boost leaving you feeling energised and revived.

The science bit

SOE is an alternative therapy, which has been shown to relax the lungs and the cardio-vascular system and improve the body's utilisation of oxygen by changing it into a more energised form, which is more readily usable by the body.

At the cellular level the body then uses this extra energy to more effectively do its jobs, and produce more ATP, Adenosine Tri-Phosphate, the body's energy currency.

Used at night, when at rest, the body is more able to use this Oxygen Energy to carry out important repair work, including detoxification and rejuvenation. This can result in deeper sleep, reduced feelings of fatigue, and increased concentration levels throughout the day.

I feel years younger than 50 and even people whom I haven't told about the SoeMac comment on how well I am looking. My skin is better and I have been told I look years younger too. I have absolutely no effects of M.E. – no fatigue, no pain, no brain fog and feel marvellous. I have a complete clear head and my memory has returned too. What more can any woman ask for?

SoeMac is helping four key condition groups:

Sleep Disorders

People with sleep disorders and those who experience poor sleep

Breathing Disorders

Those with breathing disorders, including Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disorder (COPD), Emphysema and Asthma

Fatigue & Low Energy

Sufferers of Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFS) and Myalgic Encephalomyelitis (ME), fatigue, and non-specific low energy

Autism & ASD

Children with Autism and Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)

Sleep easy

Using SoeMac can help users to experience better sleep and more energy, leaving them better equipped to deal with everyday tasks.

The quality of sleep is improved and people often sleep more soundly, for longer periods of time. It's common to feel more refreshed on waking and more energised for the day ahead.

Within one week of using SoeMac, not only was I back to a more regular sleeping pattern, but I was waking up feeling brighter and more alert and ready to face the day ahead.

SoeMac user Chic Cottrell

I am 70 years old and have been using SoeMac regularly for more than six months now. Almost immediately I have noticed an improvement in my general wellbeing; I feel less tired and more active.

Gertrude who suffers from poor sleep

In a recent test, 82% of users reported getting a better night's sleep after using SoeMac™ for just 4 weeks.

A breath of fresh air

SoeMac is helping people living with COPD, Emphysema and Asthma because it can help to clear the lungs of mucus, allowing more oxygen to flow into the body.

Here's how SoeMac may help these conditions:

- Breathing becomes more relaxed
- Eases the feeling of fighting for breath
- Improvement in sleep quality
- Less coughing and choking during the night

I would like to describe the benefits I have found from using the SoeMac - in particular, that I prefer to use it rather than a cumbersome sleep-apnea mask, and that my sleep pattern is greatly improved as a result of that.

I used to get only four hours sleep each night, whereas now I am getting seven hours, and really deep sleep. I'm less restless in bed, and no longer get the leg cramps, and my wife tells me that I snore a lot less. I also don't have the mucus problem anymore.

Energy boost

SoeMac is helping people with a wide range of medical conditions characterised by persistent fatigue as well as those who experience general low energy. The most common low energy conditions are CFS and ME.

SoeMac has also been used successfully for people with Fibromyalgia and ME, but because ME is a complex, deep-rooted condition, it can take many weeks before SoeMac starts to have an impact. The good news for people with energy and fatigue problems, is that the SoeMac is a non-invasive treatment helping many people. It works whilst you sleep.

I only manage to get 4-5 hours of sleep a night until fatigue hits, and then I can sleep for 10-12 hours straight, this is as well as the occasional nap on the sofa when I get home from work. I've been using the SoeMac for the past three months, and I'm starting to notice subtle changes. I'm not as restless during the night, and my breathing seems easier and more regulated. In the morning I don't feel as stiff in my joints, and getting out of bed much easier.

SoeMac and Autism

Sufferers of autism, especially children, are prone to a poor night's sleep, which often impacts on other family members, and a vicious circle of sleep deprivation often ensues. Sleep is often disrupted during the times of the deepest type of sleep, known as Short Wave Sleep (SWS) and Rapid Eye Movement (REM). Deprivation of this restoring, deep sleep can exacerbate some of the behavioural symptoms that children with autism often experience.

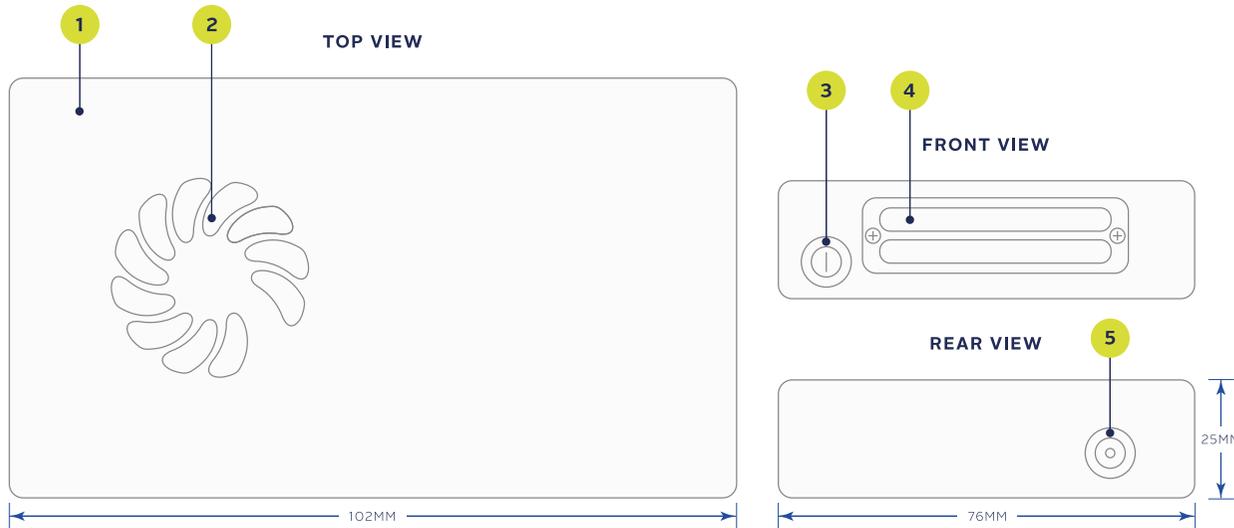

SoeMac can help children with autism to establish a better sleep quality, when the body is doing its essential repair work. By breathing in the energised oxygen from SoeMac, it can help the child's body to naturally restore itself, and consequently improve cognitive function.

My son is sleeping through the night since using the machine, and a lot more alert throughout the day. There are some positive improvements; he is doing really well at school as well, we can't part with the machine!

The Story of SoeMac

- ① ANODISED CASE
- ② AIR INTAKE
- ③ POWER BUTTON
- ④ SINGLET OXYGEN ENERGY VENT
- ⑤ POWER ADAPTER SOCKET

In 2008, and faced with a chronic health condition, SOE Health’s Managing Director Neil Stentiford was looking for helpful new technologies at the forefront of medical research.

In Germany, he discovered Oxygen Energy Therapy and a maverick scientist called Jörg Klemm. At this time, the technology had limited use and the machines were bulky, requiring the user to be hooked up with a mask of cannula. Customers received a treatment for 20 minutes every week and there was no meaningful explanation about what Oxygen Energy Therapy was, or how it really worked.

That’s when Neil’s entrepreneurial spirit kicked in and he put a team in place to bring this technology to people in a user-friendly way. Their mission was to make it smaller, suitable for home use and all at an affordable price.

By 2010, the SoeMac was born.

My dream is that one day SoeMac will become a mainstream medical device, freely available from the NHS, to everyone who needs it. It’s a long journey, but we’re making great progress and will soon be starting our first clinical trial.

We’ve also just relaunched our website after listening to valuable feedback from our customers. After all, their experiences of using SoeMac are honest, real and speak for themselves. Please share the journey with us and help to do something amazing.
